

Serendipity leads Anne to Holiday Explorers

Anne found her volunteering role through serendipity – a personal trip and a random encounter, later followed by a cinema visit where a large advertisement for Holiday Explorers appeared on screen and this happened to be exactly what she was looking for.

Holiday Explorers is a provider of the Commonwealth Home Support Service (CHSP) and NDIS and they create opportunities allowing people of all abilities the chance to enjoy a variety of experiences on trips and tours.

Anne gains great satisfaction from accompanying people on day tours and overnight trips around Adelaide and South Australia with Holiday Explorers. She appreciates the opportunity to do something active and different after retiring from her career in finance, while helping to create memories for people for whom those tour experiences would be out of reach without the Holiday Explorers' team support.

In this recording, Anne highlights how the flexibility to volunteer offered by Holiday Explorers suits her busy commitments; how the importance of good induction and training helped her in her role with the responsibility it entails; and how she appreciates the upcoming opportunity for the volunteering team also to give input to the organisation of the Holiday Explorers tours.
